Or if the earlier season lead
To the tann'd bay cock in the mead. Milton.
Bring them for food sweet boughs and oars cut,
Nor all the Winter long thy bay rick shut. May's Virgil.
Some turners turn long and slender sprigs of ivory, as small as an bay stalk. Moxon's Mech. Exer.
The best manure for meadows is the bottom of bay mows and hay stacks. Mortimer's Husbandry.
Hay and oats, in the management of a groom, will make ale. Swift.
By some bay cock, or some shady thorn,
He bids his heads both even song and morn. Dryden.
Blouzelinda, in a gamefome mood,
Behind a bay cock loudly laughing flood. Gay's Pastorals.
The hum of bees inviting sleep sincere,
Into the guileless breast, beneath the shade,
Or thrown at large amid' the fragrant bay. Thom's Autumn.
To dance the HAY. To dance in a ring: probably from dancing round a hay cock.
I will play on the tabor to the worthies,
And let them dance the bay. Shakep. Love's Labour Lost.
This maids think on the hearth they see,
When fires well nigh consumed be,
There dancing bays by two and three,
Just as your fancy calls them. Drayton's Nymphid.
The gum and glitt'ning, which with art
And study'd method, in each part
Hangs down the heart,
Looks just as if that day
Snails there had crawl'd the bay. Suckling.
HAY. n. f. [from haie, French, a hedge.] A net which incloses the haunt of an animal.
Conceys are destroyed by bays, curs, spaniels, or tumblers bred up for that purpose. Mortimer's Husbandry.

grafs for hay.
As to the return of his health and vigour, were you here,
you might enquire of his haymakers. Pope to Swift.
HAZARD. n. f. [hazard, French; azar, Spanish; bafki, Ru-nick, danger.]
1. Chance; accident; fortuitous hap.
I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die. Shakep. Rich. III.
I will upon all hazards well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well. Shak.
Where the mind does not perceive this connection, there mens opinions are not the product of judgment, but the effects of chance and hazard, of a mind floating at all adventures, without choice and without direction. Locke.
2. Danger; chance of danger.
We are bound to yield unto our Creator, the father of all mercy, eternal thanks, for that he hath delivered his law unto the world; a law wherein so many things are laid open, as a light which otherwise would have been buried in darkness, not without the hazard, or rather not with the hazard, but with the certain loss of thousands of souls, most undoubtedly now saved. Hooker, b. i.
The hazard I have run to see you here, should inform you that I love not at a common rate. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
Men are led on from one stage of life to another in a condition of the utmost hazard, and yet without the least apprehension of their danger. Rogers's Sermons.
3. A game at dice.

company, held in a great many hands together, and drew a huge heap of gold. Swift.
To HAZARD. v. a. [hazard, French.] To expose to chance;
to put into danger.
They might, by persisting in the extremity of that opinion, hazard greatly their own estates, and so weaken that part which their places now give. Hooker, b. v.
It was not in his power to adventure upon his own fortune, or bearing a publick charge to hazard himself against a man of private condition. Hayward.
To HAZARD. v. n.
1. To try the chance.
I pray you tarry; pause a day or two,
Before you hazard; for in chusing wrongs,
I lose your company. Shakep. Merchant of Venice.
2. To adventure.
She from her fellow-provinces would go,
Rather than hazard to have you her foe. Waller.
HAZARDABLE. adj. [from hazard.] Venturefome; liable to chance.
An hazardable determination it is, unto fluctuating and indis-
ferent effects, to affix a positive type or period. Brown.
HAZARDER. n. f. [from hazard.] He who hazards.
HAZARDRY. n. f. [from hazard.] Temerity; precipitation; rash adventurousness. Obsolete.
Hasty wrath, and heedless hazardry,
Do breed repentance late, and lasting infamy. Fairy Queen.
